The ferocious nature and expense of World War II left Great Britain depleted. It no longer had the money needed to maintain its vast empire or enough workers to run the country's essential services. The British Government realised that encouraging immigration from its Commonwealth countries was a necessary step to help to rebuild the country.

In 1948, the British Nationality Act allowed all British subjects the right to travel to and settle in the United Kingdom. The Empire Windrush brought one of the first wave of Caribbean migrants to the UK. The Windrush set sail from Kingston, Jamaica on 24th May 1948 with 492 official passengers (a mixture of Trinidadians, Jamaicans, Barbadians and Bermudans) as well as a number of troops, lower deck passengers and a few stowaways.

The Santa Maria is one of a number of ships who brought people from the Caribbean to the UK to be part of rebuilding the Mother Country.

The Journey

---

JOD no.: P67110CT

---

From 1947, thousands of individuals and families made their way from the Caribbean to England. Initially, many came by ship, on a long arduous journey. Later, many came by plane, a much quicker and easier journey.

Some of the ship's that people came to England on were:

- SS Almanzora
- SS Ormonde
- HMT Empire Windrush
- MS Oranjestad
- RMS Ariguani

- SS Antilles
- SS Ascania
- SS Begoña
- SS Bonita
- SS Cavina
- SS Colombie
- SS Flandre
- SS Gascogne
- SS Irpinia
- SS Matina
- SS Montserrat
- SS Oranje Nassau
- SS Windward Islands

Those who came by plane often remember the distinctive BOAC branding of the company.

Working in London

---

In the post-war years, there was a drive to recruit from the Caribbean to help rebuild the British economy. In particular, the construction sector and services sector were short of staff. The most famous examples of services recruiting from the Caribbean were the newly created NHS and the public transport sector.

Many of those who came from the Caribbean for work faced racism, discrimination and structural inequality and struggled to find work that reflected their qualifications.

The contribution of these individuals to the British economy is undeniable.
